Defect: The plastic casing at the top of the high chair leg may develop cracks or break which may lead to the chair legs twisting which can impact on the strength and stability of the chairs legs.

Hazard: If the plastic shell breaks or cracks and the chair legs becomes unstable, this could result in the chair collapsing, increasing the risk of injury to small children.

What todo: Consumers should immediately cease using the product and check if the product is affected by reviewing the product details beside the barcode, which is located under the plastic seat of the high chair.

Consumers with affected products should go to www.safetymatterscnp.com.au and register. A supportive crossbrace kit designed to strengthen the structure of the chair and prevent twisting of the chair legs will be sent to the consumer, with installation instructions, at no cost.
